Seattle Pacific University's MEd in Curriculum and Instruction (C&I) provides five pathways for teachers to bolster their instructional expertise and leadership capacity. Develop your skills in educational theory, research, and best practices to enhance your ability to create culturally sustainable and inclusive learning spaces that impact the health of our schools.

Depending upon your specific professional goals and interests, there are five areas of emphasis: Curriculum and Instruction, Teacher Leadership, Multilingual Learners, Theological Education, and a Self-Designed program.

The Self-Designed emphasis is for graduates who want to craft a program that best fits their professional goals. With the program chair, students design a course of study drawing from our different graduate programs, and can include a pathway that leads to Washington State Reading and ELL endorsements for students who meet coursework requirements.

Admission Requirements
