

NON-MATRICULATED INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS

Non-matriculated students are those who have not been formally admitted to the University. Before enrolling in courses at Seattle Pacific University, non-matriculated international students who are non-native English speakers must demonstrate English proficiency. They may do this by presenting an acceptable official English proficiency test score (<https://catalog.spu.edu/undergraduate/admissions/applying-international-student/english-proficiency-requirement/>) to the Office of the Registrar (<http://spu.edu/administration/office-of-the-registrar/>) or by submitting an official college/university transcript from a U.S. institution showing a minimum cumulative GPA of 3.0, and grades of B (3.0) or better in both English Composition I and II.

In addition, non-matriculated students must submit required government documentation to International Student Services (<http://spu.edu/current-students/international-students/>) no later than the first day of the quarter in which they are enrolled.

Undergraduate international students may take no more than 45 quarter credits toward a degree without being formally admitted to Seattle Pacific University. Post-baccalaureate students are limited to 15 such credits.

More information about enrolling at SPU as a non-matriculated student (<https://spu.edu/administration/office-of-the-registrar/non-matriculated-faq/>) is available here.
